About SCOA and the Australian Settlement Sector

The Settlement Council of Australia's role is to ensure the best possible settlement outcomes for migrants, including people of refugee background. Our vision is for an equitable, respectful and inclusive Australia where effective settlement outcomes provide every opportunity to humanitarian entrants and migrants to fully participate in society and to realise their full potential. SCoA's work is informed by principles of human rights, multicultural democracy, social justice and inclusion. National Settlement Outcomes Standards and Settlement Sector Quality Framework aim to achieve transparent, accountable, respectful and client-centred governance and leadership.

Many unforeseen changes on the world stage have occurred since the last SCoA conference in 2016, not least of all the global COVID-19 pandemic. In that time there have been major shifts in settlement development across Australia, where the people we serve navigate their new society and exercise their determination to start afresh and to belong, as well as to achieve the aspirations they have for their children.

The settlement sector is a powerhouse of knowledge, skills, experience, resourcefulness and humanity with a collective history of migration and settlement spanning nearly half a century. The collective experience the sector brings to civil society globally, and to Australia's multicultural development locally, is enormous! The settlement sector's work is at the coalface; its expertise in democratic participation, diversity in organisation, collaboration and sector innovation provides our global societies with a vast repository of knowledge and experience, and most importantly, a framework for human rights, social justice and social harmony.

About the Conference

The conference will bring together key innovators to highlight achievements and develop strategies for building a positive multicultural future. Speakers will be drawn from the settlement sector; people with lived settlement experience; academics; the three tiers of government; industry; and community service providers.
